More Schools Flock to PBIS

The number of schools participating in PBIS skyrocketed by 25 percent since last September, with an additional 77 teams beginning to create universal systems to support all students and staff within their school buildings. That’s because more schools are recognizing the importance of this research-based framework that is proven to enhance academic and behavioral success.

The goal for this preparation year is to develop strong Tier 1 systems for actively teaching and recognizing appropriate social skills and behavior, using consistent systems to discourage inappropriate behavior, and educating all staff in how to implement and participate in the process. Training across the continuum of supports is an ongoing effort. Contact your AEA PBIS coordinator for more information.

IOWA PBIS 10-YEAR GROWTH

Iowa PBIS Data Collection

The Iowa Department of Education collects data from PBIS schools in conjunction with the Research Institute for Studies in Education at Iowa State University. Beginning in January 2012, PBIS schools will report fidelity and systems level outcomes using an online database.

This data collection system will provide information on the effectiveness of PBIS statewide and will provide evidence of statewide sustainability.

Data is reported biannually on January 31th and June 30th.

Please contact your AEA PBIS Coordinator for more information.
